SECOND GRADE

In social studies, we will be learning about people of color who have made a difference in our next social studies unit. They will research how they have made a difference and how we honor them. Students also continue to use the mood meter to help express feelings as well as have time to discuss their feelings, appreciations, joys or hurts with each other in small groups.

As reader's students just wrapped up their "Reading Tours" where they acted as "tour guides" to teach others in different grade 2 classrooms about a topic of their choice. They read all about these topics across multiple books during reading and also practiced retelling what they learned. All students did a wonderful job! In writing, students

Students continue to build their capacity for reflecting and goal setting by working on personal goals during rocket block, writing and reading, some of these goals will not be focused only helping themselves as a learner, but are also intended to help others in the community.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!
